Abstract. China, a country with a long history and a specific culture, has also a long and specific astronomy. Ancient Chinese astronomers observed the stars, named and distributed them into constellations in a very specific way, which is quite different from the current one. Around the Zodiac, stars are divided into four big regions corresponding with the four orientations, and each is related to a totem, either the Azure Dragon, the Vermilion Bird, the White Tiger or the Murky Warrior. We present a general pattern of the ancient Chinese constellations, including the four totems, their stars and their names.

Keywords. China, constellations, mansions

1. Introduction

Three enclosures, four symbols and twenty-eight mansions characterise the ancient Chinese constellations. This division of the starry sky began to appear in China before the Zhou and Qin dynasties. The three enclosures refer to three areas around the North celestial pole: the Purple Forbidden enclosure, the Supreme Palace enclosure and the Heavenly Market enclosure. The four symbols are distributed near the ecliptic Zodiac and the lunar orbit and are represented by four totems: the Azure Dragon of the East, the Vermilion Bird of the South, the White Tiger of the West and the Black Tortoise of the North. Every symbol was divided into seven sections which were known as mansions. There are twenty-eight mansions in this system and the Moon goes through approximately a mansion every day, reflecting the lunar month. The twenty-eight mansions[†] were named Horn, Dipper, Legs, Well, Neck, Ox, Bond, Ghosts, Root, Girl, Stomach, Willow, Room, Emptiness, Hairy head, Star, Heart, Rooftop, Net, Extended net, Tail, Encampment, Turtle beak, Wings, Winnowing-basket, Wall, Three stars, Chariot, as shown in Fig. 1.

2. Tables of star names

The following tables are a comparison list of star names both in traditional Chinese characters and in English. They are classified in seven tables according to the three enclosures and the four animal images which they belong to[‡].

3. Implications

Ancient Chinese astronomy has taken an important rôle in both the Chinese culture and the world astronomical culture. Chinese ancestors divided the constellations and denominated the stars in a quite different way as the Greeks did. It will be an interesting work to carry out a comparison between these two systems. Ancient Chinese constellations were rooted in a strong belief of harmony among the heaven, the Earth and human beings. By studying the stories behind the the names of the stars, one learns ancient Chinese astronomy and also Chinese history and philosophy as well.
